Seven million people starving, Reds say UNDERGROUND ACTIVE

San Francisco, March 7. The Communist Chinese Vice-Premier, Tung Pi-wu, painted a grim picture of China's food situation today in which he said, 7,000,000 people were starving and the country was facing four more lean months before the first harvest in June.

A Peking broadcast said that Tung, speaking before the Central Relief Commission, admitted that the people were eating "wild vegetables". —a Chinese euphemism for leaves, grass and similar inedibles.

The Committee's report claimed that Hong Kong is the training ground for Communist agents destined to create havoc in Southern

It added that the Supreme Communist Council, composed of six National Committees for activities in Indo-China, Slam, Burma, Malaya, indonesia and the Philippines, has its seat in Hong Kong. Each of the aix committees, it was claimed, included five directing members.

THE MOSCOW PACT

A certain amount of surprise was caused by the recent United Press despatch from London stating that a line by line study of the new Sino-Soviet Treaty had convinced official quarters there that Moscow had come off second best in its dealings with the Chinese Communist leader Mao Tse-tung. The new Pact, it was suggested, represented "a Russian climbdown without precedent in recent foreign relations." In support of this judgment, it was pointed out that in 1945 China and Russia promised not to conclude any alliance against each other or to take part in any coalition directed against each other. This, said the despatch, was omitted in the new treaty, giving China a loophole for consultation or even co-operation with other Powers, providing that they do not entail acts of aggression against Russia.

Now if that were true and actually it is untrue-it would vitally affect the whole Pact. The original 1945 Pact was concluded before the end of the war, when the Western Powers were Russia's allies. This clause therefore was without significance so far as they were concerned. After the war, even though relations between the West and the Kremlin began to cool off, the article remained innocuous so far as China was concerned because of the close and intimate relations that existed between her and the Western Powers. But it complexion after the People's Government came into power, with its policy of "leaning to one side" and its hostile attitude to the United States. Even if Peking did, or should, desire to improve relations that country and the in general, it, seemed estopped from so doing by this clause. Peking Radio put out a long commentary on the Pact on February 15 quoting clauses of the Treaty, and preceding and interlarding them with comment designed to put the best possible face on the Pact "Narrow Nationalism" was denounced and stress was on the "fraternal" nature of the alliance. It was pointed out that the situation had undergone a "fundamental change" between August 1945 and now. Japan -had defeated and the Kuomintang Government overthrown, while China had become a People's Democratic Republic. Therefore a new treaty and agreements were necessary and had been "immediately concluded."

"Our great ally, the Soviet-Union, on the basis of the clause is interpolated in the policy of Generalissimo new Pact which was not in Stalin, has manifested, great the 1945 Treaty, The London moral principle and loyalty despatch says this provides by deciding on a settlement that relations will develop in of the questions of the conformity with the princip Chinese Changehun Railway, ciples of equality and mutual which conforms to the pre. Stalin should surely have known from his own reports the enormous deployment of German strength which now began to be visible to British Intelligence all along the Russian frontier. On June 28, a work after Hitler's Invasion of Russia, a meeting of the Japanese Cabinet and cofficials of the imperial Household was held. Matsucke found his position immediately weekened. He had "lost face" because he had not known of Hitler's agreements, and invites at universal security."

These decisions were not agreeable to Matsucka. In order to still up agitation' for entering the war on Germany's side, he had one of his speeches printed as a pamphlet for wide distribution. The copies were suppressed by the Japanese Government. On July 16 he disappeared from office.

Thus we see as this world dramn marches on how all these three coldly-calculating empires made at this moment mistakes disastrous alike to their ambitions arti their safety. ## speech Amendments to from the Throne TOTAL WAR' IN HOUSE

London, March 6. The Conservative Opposition tonight made a frontal attack on the slender Parliamentary superiority of the Labour Government by moving two amendments to the Speech from the Throne.

The amendments, proposed by Mr. Winston Churchill, head of the Conservative Party, and other Opposition leaders, can bring about the fall of the Government if either is passed.

The amendments regret that there was no reference in the address to the iron and steel industry and that no more offective measures were mentioned to deal with the housing shortage.

The Prime Minister was speaking during the first day's debate on the Speech from the Throne. The debate was opened by Mr. Anthony Eden, Deputy Leader of the Opposition, and in the course of a review of Britain's present position he contended that the Sterling balances are helping to bleed Britain to dentil. "Any idea of repudiating them straight away is quite wrong." he said.

Major question.

Earlier, Mr. Eden, opening the debute, described Sterling balances as a major question.

Was it not the case, he asked, that the American loan provided for releases not exceeding £42% millions annually whereas they had risen to £278,000,000 in the first nine months of last year?

"It means that each worker engaged on production for export is working one day in six on the production of goods for which no corresponding imports are recelved." he raid.

He said that while it re mained the Labour Government's purpose to nationalise the steel industry, there nothing to be done in the matter immediately.

The Steel Corporation which a to run the industry could not be appointed until October 1950, and the earliest date nationalisation was January, 1951, but he insisted, amid Government cheers that their pur pose is to give effect to acts pas-

"The fact that Parliament almost equally divided does not inean that the hand of this country in foreign affairs should be weakened in the slightest degree! he said.

Turning to economics. Attlee said, "We have only two years of the breathing space accorded us by Marshall Aid before we have to stand, completely on our own feet," he said.

Watenstedt-Salzgitter,

March 6. An infuriated crowd of 1,000 German workers tonight stormed and burned down the British Dismantling Commission heaadquarters at the huge Hermann Goering steel plant here.

A crowd trying to stop dismantling of part of a forge had burst into the offices of the Commission, smashed windows and made a bonfire of radios, telephones, files, maps and technical charts.

Five British officers barricaded themselves in one of the rooms of the building during the rioting but escaped when police detachments were rushed to the scene. The British Rhine Army Headquarters ordered troops in the area to stand by after the building was burned down, a British spokesman said.

The spokesman said that British troops called out from Brunswick, the local Headquarters, found the rioters had dispersed when they reached the building. .The attempted demolition had tonight been abandoned and was postponed until tomorrow,-Reu-

Work in spare hours good for teen-agers By Betty Betz

"What's the good of a part-time job?" some dimwits ask, "It's usually some silly kind of work like licking stamps, it doesn't pay much, and those jobs aren't even permanent. What's the future in it anyway?"

You can't blame these young folks in a way, as perhaps they are partially justified; it's perfectly true that you certainly can't make a career of licking stamps.

When we're young we all like to visualise ourselves in glamour jobs with a half dozen private secretaries and an office decorated by Dorothy Draper.

Naturally it's a letdown to take on a bottom-rung job o sharpening pencils and emptying wastebaskets. If you don't feel the urge to take a part-time or Summer job you may be suffering from pure luziness or perhaps you just don't realise how valuable this working experience will be later on in your career.

Many young people think that family finances are the only reason for working while still in school. Part-time jobs may not be the most glamourous ones. but they certainly are the backbone of a sound and solid future Importance of Job

Thirty-five bombs would be enough

Madison, Wisconsin,

March 6. An enemy able to deliver 35 hydrogen bombs in surpried attacks could decimate the metropolitan population of the 27 largest cities in the United States, a nuclear physicist said today.

Dr. Lapp said: "If we alone possessed the hydrogen bomb; it -might serve as a temporary deterrent to aggression, but we know now that what American scientists can do, so can the Russians." -United Press.

tained to a high standard of bright badminton with all four players pulling out some grand shots at one time or other. A terrifle pace was set right from the beginning by both pairs and was maintained right up to the end. The scorers were actually Dramatic remained unchanged a, neck to neck for the greater part of both sets and it was the slightly greater stendihess and more forceful smashes of Lee and Foo that

Hooi of the University, one the loss of favour for Barnes Park | of the top-favourites of the Junior in the Lincolnshire and Fightin' [Single's title, proved too good for young M. Kempton of Kowloon Docks. Kempton put up a good fight at the initial stages but inability to put his net shots close > to the net put him to great disadvantage. Gloria Silva of St. Teres scored another good wia to enter the semi-final of the Ladie: Singles event. Miss Doris Ramsay her opponent, though new to the game, gave a favourable display and with a little more variety of strokes, should be well in the running for honours next year. Full results
